Schools take new approach to math

By Victoria Grabner
vgrabner@thegleaner.com

The world is constantly changing. And that means what students are taught about the world — how to work in it, how to succeed and how to help it improve — must constantly change, too.

That's why the Henderson County Schools have made innovative changes to its math curriculum to help students succeed in college and beyond.

"There once was a time in the United States of America when Americans outscored other nations in student math achievement," said Dana Guess-Chumbler, district math coordinator.

"Over time, that has changed, and many countries are doing a much better job preparing students for higher paying jobs with technical degrees that require a strong math background. As part of this change, we want to make sure our students can fill high paying and technical jobs and have the skills necessary to do so. With that, we have to be innovative in the way we are teaching kids in the classroom."

Here are some examples of how the district is working to help students improve their math skills:

- Math is now taught the way it's taught in Singapore, which has the highest math scores in the world. This approach requires students to use methods that demand mathematical reasoning and problem solving.

Meacham Country Hams still curing after 80 years

Its origins seem like an unlikely recipe for survival — a small business opening near a small town in the midst of the Great Depression. Yet Meacham Country Hams of Sturgis survived and has thrived, and as it celebrates its 80th anniversary, it is heading into the holiday season, its busiest time of the year.

Its origins date back five generations, to before 1900, when William Meacham's grandmother cured hams on the family farm.

"He learned how to do it from her," William's granddaughter Amanda Meacham Coy, said this week.

A platter of Meacham Derby ham is sliced and ready Tuesday for a customer's Thanksgiving meal. Derby is a milder, less salty flavored ham.

Decline in abortions biggest in more than decade

■ Experts believe recession played role

By Mike Stobbe
Associated Press

NEW YORK — U.S. abortions fell 5 percent during the recession and its aftermath in the biggest one-year decrease in at least a decade, perhaps because women are more careful to use birth control when times are tough, researchers say.

The decline, detailed on Wednesday by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, came in 2009, the most recent year for which statistics are available. Both the number of abortions and the abortion rate dropped by the same percentage.

Some experts theorize that some women believed they couldn't afford to get pregnant.

"They stick to straight and narrow ... and they are more careful about birth control," said Elizabeth Ananat, a Duke University assistant professor of public policy and economics who has researched abortions.

While many states have aggressively restricted access to abortion, most of those laws were adopted in the past two years and are not believed to have played a role in the decline.

Abortions have been dropping slightly over much of the past decade. But before this latest report, they seemed to have pretty much leveled off.

Nearly all states report abortion numbers to the federal government, but it's voluntary. A few states — including California, which has the largest population and largest number of abortion providers — don't send in data. While experts estimate there are more than 1 million abortions nationwide each year, the CDC counted about 785,000 in 2009 because of incomplete reporting.

To come up with reliable year-to-year comparisons, the CDC used the numbers from 43 states and two cities — those that have been sending in data consistently for at least 10 years. The researchers found that abortions per 1,000 women of childbearing age fell from about 16 in 2008 to roughly 15 in 2009. That translates to nearly 38,000 fewer abortions in one year.

Mississippi had the lowest abortion rate, at 4 per 1,000 women of childbearing age. The state also had only a couple of abortion providers and has the nation's high-

Goodfellows drive begins with goal of $33,000

Gleaner staff

The Goodfellows fundraiser kicks off today, with organizers saying there's roughly seven days less on the calendar to raise more than $30,000 to meet the 2012 goal.

"Our party is a week earlier this year, on Dec. 16," said Richard Pendergraft, one of the organizers. "Normally, it would be on Dec. 23, the Sunday before Christmas ... that shaves off seven days." It's that last week in which donations really pour in, he said.

Pendergraft said this year's goal is $33,000 — same as 2011.

"Really, the base of everything we buy, such as the underclothes, the prices stay pat," he said. The underclothes are purchased from Fruit of the Loom in Bowling Green.

"We know that prices have gone up, but most businesses, if we tell them we're buying for Goodfellows, they give us really good deals," Pendergraft said.

"We estimate what we think it will cost" to purchase clothing and a few Christmas gifts for children in need, and work within that financial margin, he said.

"Our children count will be around 600" who will be given a taste of Christmas on Dec. 16. "Right now, we're at 582. The names came from the school system," he said.

"Last year, we went over the goal," he said. "It was really surprising ... Last year, I was prepared not to reach the goal."

"This year bothers me," Pendergraft said. With the state of the economy, "I worry if people have anymore to give."

Even with these concerns, the organization is moving forward. The party will be on Dec. 16 at South Middle School.

Donations toward the big party may be dropped off at the front desk at The Gleaner, 455 Klutzy Park Plaza Drive, between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The Gleaner serves as a clearinghouse for donations, and publishes the names of donors except in cases where donors wish to remain anonymous.

Those who are interested in contributing to the Goodfellows can also send their donations to Goodfellows Party Fund in care of The Gleaner, P.O. Box 4, Henderson, KY 42419.

Fire destroys Sturgis sign building

■ Another downtown structure damaged

Gleaner staff

A fire destroyed one building in downtown Sturgis and damaged an adjacent business Tuesday night.

The fire at 5th Street Signs at 10 W. Fifth St., (Kentucky 109) was reported at 8:45 p.m., according to Union County Emergency Management Director Vernon Martin.

The sign shop building was a total loss, and a mine training business in an adjacent building suffered smoke and water damage. “They did a good job keeping the fire out” of the second building, Martin said.

According to its Facebook page, 5th Street Signs is a family-owned business that specializes in custom graphics, vinyl signs, T-shirts, ball uniforms, decals and license plates.

No injuries were reported.

Two blocks of both Kentucky 109 and U.S. 60 near the town's four-way stop were closed for approximately four hours while firefighters extinguished the fire, requiring traffic to be detoured around the scene.

A fire marshal was investigating the cause of the fire on Wednesday, according to Martin.

Responding to the blaze were the Sturgis Volunteer Fire Department, Morganfield Fire Department, Union County Volunteer Fire Department and volunteer fire departments from Sullivan, Henshaw, Waverly, Whispering Meadows and Wheatcroft along with the Dixon Fire Department, Sturgis Police Department, Union County Sheriff's Department, Sturgis Utilities Department and Kentucky Utilities Co.

Business advocates push to ‘shop small’ Saturday

Gleaner staff

The crush of shoppers seeking Black Friday deals at national store chains may be dominating the news. But a host of small-business advocates are once again urging consumers to also shop or dine at hometown businesses as part of its Small Business Saturday this weekend.

For the third year, American Express is offering a $25 credit on its customers’ credit card statements if they register in advance at www.ShopSmall.com and then spend $25 or more on the Saturday after Thanksgiving at a small business that is registered at the website.

Small Business Saturday was started in 2010 by American Express to drive sales to small businesses and to recognize their vital contributions to the economy, job creation and local communities.

The promotion is supported by scores of organizations ranging from national groups such as the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Federation of Independent Business to local organizations such as the Downtown Henderson Partnership and Henderson

Chamber of Commerce.

“Small businesses are the backbone of our economy and the fabric of our communities,” Karen G. Mills, administrator of the U.S. Small Business Administration, said in a statement. “Over the last two decades, small and new businesses have been responsible for creating two out of every three net new jobs in the U.S., and today over half of all working Americans own or work for a small business.

“By shopping small on Nov. 24 and throughout this holiday season, we can support the men and women who are building these amazing small businesses,” she said.

Turkey farms planned in western Kentucky

The Associated Press

CALHOUN — Turkey farms are coming to western Kentucky by way of an Indiana company.

Executives with Jasper, Ind.,-based Farbest Farms outlined plans for the venture Tuesday night at a Fiscal Court meeting in McLean County.

The Messenger-Inquirer reports the plans include a 50-acre brooding hub in McLean County where turkeys would be hatched and raised until they are 30 days old. At that point, the birds would be sent to one of 10 family farms that will be located in McLean, Daviess and Ohio counties. When the birds are 20 weeks old, they will be taken to the Farbest processing plant in Vincennes, Ind., said live production manager Jay Houchin.

Although residents near the farms complained about possible negative effects on property values, farmers and businesses said they were glad to see Farbest come into the area.

Farbest officials estimated the brooding facility, which will include six 30,000-square-foot barns, would be completed by the end of next year.

Farbest President Ted Seger said the company would be a good neighbor.

"We're going to live up to every law," he said. "Environmentally, we'll do the things we have to do and beyond. We'll take care of those things."

However, may homeowners said they don't want poultry operations near their homes, due to potential issues with smell, pollution and traffic.

Chris Nelson, who represented Livermore's Advanced Feeding Systems, said the new operation would allow his company to add jobs and do more local business.

"We have approximately 350 poultry houses in our county (worth about $250 million in property value). That property value obviously means revenue, and we very seldom have opportunity for economic development," Nelson said.

Court upholds conviction of woman in boy's death

The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE — A Louisville woman was compelled to incriminate herself after she ran over an 11-year-old boy, but her rights were not violated because other evidence suggesting her guilt was "more than extensive," the Kentucky Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

The high court's decision came in the case of 33-year-old Angela Baumia, who was convicted in 2011 of hitting Dylan Geitgey with her car as she sped away from a party where she had been drinking a year earlier.

A jury found Baumia guilty of murder, first-degree wanton endangerment, criminal mischief and drunken driving in the June 26, 2010 death of Dylan Geitgey. Prosecutors say Geitgey was thrown 69 feet after being struck by Baumia's car.

Prosecutors say Baumia had a blood alcohol level of between .23 and .26 — roughly three times the legal limit — at the time of the collision. Police estimated that Baumia was driving between 32 and 45 mph when she hit Geitgey on the 25 mph street.

Multiple witnesses described Baumia as driving erratically at a high speed when she struck Geitgey.

Baumia declined to take a breathalyzer test at a hospital in the hours after the accident.

"My father told me not to talk to the ... police," Baumia told Officer Buddy Van Cleave.

Justice Will T. Scott concluded that, even though Baumia had not been informed of her legal rights before making the statement, the comment constituted an invocation of those rights.

Court clears way for mental hearing

LOUISVILLE — A Kentucky death row inmate can pursue a claim of being mentally disabled and ineligible for the death penalty in a 1987 kidnapping, rape and murder after the Kentucky Supreme Court on Wednesday turned away a request by prosecutors to reconsider the case.

The decision is the latest twist in the long-running case of Gregory Lee Wilson, 56, who was condemned to death for the 1987 slaying of 36-year-old Debbie Pooley, a restaurant manager in Kenton County. The high court issued a one-line order and didn't give a reason for declining to rehear the case.

Wilson's case now moves back to Kenton Circuit Court, where Wilson's attorneys can attempt to show a mental disability, which would exclude a death sentence as a possible punishment for Wilson in Pooley's death.

Police: Mom tried to abandon child

LOUISVILLE — A Louisville mother has been arrested after allegedly trying to abandon her child.

WDRB-TV reports 39-year-old Fengshan Huang tried to leave a Sam's Club without her 6-year-old daughter.

When store employees, who found the child by herself in an aisle, tried to give her back to Huang, the mother allegedly responded by telling store employees to keep her, saying she didn't want the girl anymore.

Police say they charged Huang with first-degree wanton endangerment and took the girl to the Home of the Innocents.

Good advice for holiday: Be careful!

Thanksgiving is a peculiar holiday except in one respect: It brings out the homing instincts in Americans. At great expense and inconvenience and, sadly, some danger, they will make herculean efforts to be with their families and friends for a feast — turkey, stuffing, cranberries and pumpkin pie — that is such a tradition it’s almost a matter of law.

It commemorates a poorly documented 1621 gathering in New England between religious exiles from England, who may or may not have been starving, and the local Native Americans, who were skilled at living off the land they called their own.

The feast seemed to cement an era of goodwill and cooperation. Instead, it marked a steady slide into mutual suspicion and resentment that culminated in an Indian uprising in 1675 called King Philip’s War, which nearly wiped out the New England colony until the pilgrims’ descendants and their Indian allies suppressed it in 1678.

There is plenty of time to poke around in the obscure dark and bloody corners of American history. We can afford one day a year that asks nothing of us but to be with our loved loves, be grateful for what we have and see that the destitute and our far-flung military share in the feast.

And, my heavens, how we try!

Almost 44 million Americans — by the AAA’s estimate — will travel 50 miles or more from their homes, sometimes with tragic consequences.

Traffic fatality figures show Thanksgiving is perhaps one of the year’s deadliest days, if not the most deadly, for traffic fatalities.

In 2010, according to federal figures, more people died on Thanksgiving than any other holiday that year.

Immediately, we have two things to be thankful for: the safe arrival of our guests and their safe return home.

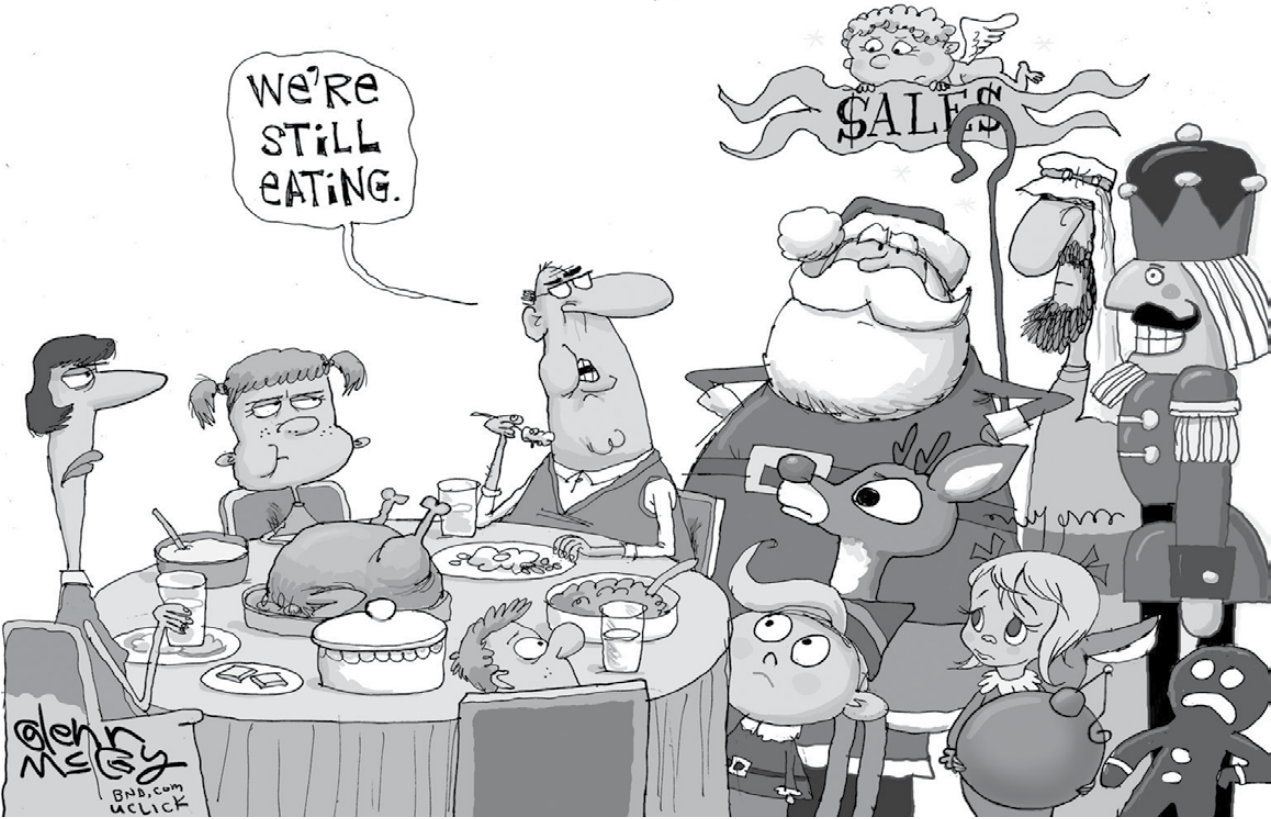

A holiday that asks only for a smile or other expression of gratitude should be cherished, but to hear our worrywart commentariat tell it, Thanksgiving is under attack, specifically from the insidiously named “Black Friday Creep.”

The Friday after Thanksgiving is the beginning of the make-or-break sales season for many retailers, and thus the stores have been opening earlier and earlier, until, following the example set by many colleges, the weekend is beginning tonight — Thanksgiving, to be precise.

This is a development to be watched.

But Thanksgiving has survived Puritan cooking, football on TV and King Philip’s War. It will survive this, too.

Happy Thanksgiving.
Be joyful.

Giving thanks for a beloved brother in age. He was in fact a bit spoiled and occasionally more than a little brattish. But he adored his siblings and they him as they entered adulthood, with him as “their kid.” His older sister, 15 years his senior, often seemed to consider him hers, protecting him from the wrath of the other two siblings when they no longer could tolerate his shenanigans.

All in all, while it might be too much to call his childhood idyllic, it was better than that of millions of other kids despite the prosperity of immediate postwar America. Michael grew into a handsome, 6-foot-3 redhead, often hot tempered, with a first-rate mind, a restless curiosity and a love of golf inherited from his father. He became very good at it. His grades throughout school were excellent, and he went off to a prestigious institution, DePauw University, graduated with honors and headed to law school, where he also excelled.

His life subsequently was not without turmoil. Whose life isn’t — at least if it is an interesting one? But he developed both as a father and a lawyer, and he became a respected member of the vital city from which this column is being written. In fact, 40 years of aggressive law was tempered by a compassion and capacity for charity and friendship outside the courtroom. He mentored his younger partners and showered his children and grandchildren, nieces and nephews with the same attention and love he had received from his parents.

After two marriage attempts, both of which he tried too hard perhaps to make a success, he finally met the woman he should have in the first place and their love blossomed into a rare compatibility of intellect, spirituality and adventure. His siblings, now down to two with the early departure of their sister, breathed a sigh of relief. On their 10th anniversary, he was ready to leave the law to his younger partners and begin a life in an enterprise that would rejuvenate the bodies and souls of his wife and himself.

Those are the abbreviated details of a life for which we will soon come together as an extended family to give thanks and to express sorrow on the special holiday for having had the privilege to have known and loved Michael Thomasson, an enveloping presence with an enormous sense of outrage and a passionate love of people generally. He was truly a kindred spirit and a brother who never failed to give advice and aid and to express concern.

Two days before he was to retire, Michael died in an auto accident while talking with the love of his life about their plans for Thanksgiving. He never knew what hit him. His wife, Debbie, a trauma doctor, listened helplessly as emergency personnel tried to revive Michael. He was 67.

God bless him and you on this special day. May it be one of love and thanks.

A dozen women representatives in the U.S. House of Representatives said it was “sexist” to beat up on United Nations Ambassador Susan Rice for her misleading account of what happened in Libya on Sept. 11, and there’s this to be said for their position: Rice wasn’t the one most at fault for the deception.

President Barack Obama himself said in a recent press conference that she made her public remarks at the request of the White House and only cited information she had been given. And Gen. David Petraeus, the recently resigned director of the Central Intelligence Agency, told of how the intelligence initially sent out by the CIA spoke of al-Qaida’s likely involvement in what appeared to be a terrorist event, information left out of the Rice account.

The Rice story told in five TV interviews was that the killing of four Americans at the Benghazi consulate rose out of a spontaneous response to an anti-Islamic film produced in the United States. That version of the event is little short of a hoax, and the real sexists would appear to be the people who altered the information before it was given to Rice, in effect making this bright, articulate, highly educated woman a convenient tool sent out to tell an untruth — unwittingly — to the American people during Obama’s re-election campaign.

The version of events as told by Rice obscured the threatening rise of al-Qaida despite the assassination of Osama bin Laden. Some explanations proffered for disguising the truth are laughable. One is that the administration did not want al-Qaida to know we were spying on the group, as if these terrorists who are viciously evil are also stupid. They aren’t. The truth is that Obama’s policies on dealing with terrorists have not been nearly as successful as oratory would have it, and that his policies in a variety of areas have fallen short or failed miserably.

It would be unfair to blame Obama for everything going wrong in our country and the world, but there has been a pretense of high accomplishment that is not matched by actual events. This supposedly bold, transformative administration failed in preventing an outbreak in hostilities in the Middle East, as we are now seeing in the conflict between Israel and Hamas. Its policies have also failed to keep Iran from advancing its nuclear program and in holding Russia to a 20-year treaty requiring the destruction of its nuclear weapons.

Domestically, Obama policies have gotten in the way of a major energy boom and have failed to restore the American economy to anything close to what would have happened under the austerity programs that have worked pretty well for some European nations.

On top of all this are such outrages as potentially dangerous leaks of classified information, the unconstitutional revision of laws without congressional approval, the illegal appointment of a new, hugely powerful regulatory chieftain and the enactment of Obamacare, a measure now causing layoffs and likely to impede health delivery and complicate ordinary life in ways yet barely imaginable.

The difficult process of finding out all the details of the Libyan tragedy and the details of what actions preceded it suggest serious fumbling, a cover-up and the possibility of a serious scandal.

I honestly hope I am wrong. While scandals may ultimately lead to the rectifying of wrongs and a stronger democracy, they can be scarily disabling in the short term, making it somewhere between difficult and impossible to accomplish some ends endorsed by people all over the ideological spectrum.

As we get closer to the truth, we may discover decisions that were defensible even if regrettable in hindsight. That, I think, is the best we can hope for.

U.S. drought worsens after signs of progress

By Jim Suhr
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — The worst U.S. drought in decades has deepened again after more than a month of encouraging reports of slowly improving conditions, a drought-tracking consortium said Wednesday, as scientists struggled for an explanation other than a simple lack of rain.

While more than half of the continental U.S. has been in a drought since summer, rain storms had appeared to be easing the situation week by week since late September. But that promising run ended with Wednesday's weekly U.S. Drought Monitor report, which showed increases in the portion of the country in drought and the severity of it.

The report showed that 60.1 percent of the lower 48 states were in some form of drought as of Tuesday, up from 58.8 percent the previous week. The amount of land in extreme or exceptional drought — the two worst classifications — increased from 18.3 percent to 19.04 percent.

The Drought Monitor's map tells the story, with dark red blotches covering the center of the nation and portions of Texas and the Southeast as an indication of where conditions are the most intense. Those areas are surrounded by others in lesser stages of drought, with only the Northwest, Florida and a narrow band from New England south to Mississippi escaping.

Marge Gatti stands in front of her home, which was damaged by Superstorm Sandy, in the Midland Beach section of the Staten Island borough of New York. Of all things material, Gatti has nothing. And yet on Thanksgiving Day she said she will be counting her blessings.

Sandy victims preparing for subdued Thanksgiving

By Meghan Barr
Associated Press

NEWYORK—The things that Marge Gatti once cherished are lying on what's left of her deck, spattered in mud, like a yard sale gone awry.

The white fur coat she bought for $80 at an auction. Family videos. A peach-colored glass creamer from England. Books she never got a chance to read.

The stuff is ruined, just like her sodden Staten Island home, which was ravaged by Superstorm Sandy's floodwaters and will be demolished in the coming weeks. Of all things material, Gatti has nothing.

And yet, on Thanksgiving Day, she will be counting her blessings.

"My sons are alive. They were trapped here," said Gatti, 67, who lived in the beige home down the block from the Atlantic Ocean for 32 years. "I'm thankful that I have all my family. And that my friends are still here, you know? We're all friends now. There's no strangers in life anymore."

It will be a subdued Thanksgiving for families hit hard by the storm as they gather with friends and strangers alike, seeking to celebrate the people and things that were spared when so much was lost. But they will not be left to fend for themselves.

Restaurants are donating meals, strangers and churches are opening their doors, and people from across the nation have sent an outpouring of donations for those unable to roast their own turkey.

New York City and Macy's have set aside 5,000 bleacher seats along the Thanksgiving Day Parade route for families affected by Superstorm Sandy. Occupy Sandy, the storm-relief offshoot of the Occupy Wall Street movement, will host a Thanksgiving dinner in lower Manhattan.

Jennifer Kaufman of Washington Township, N.J., started a Facebook page called "A Place at the Table" that matches willing Thanksgiving hosts with families who have been displaced by Sandy.

"No one should eat alone on Thanksgiving," Kaufman said.

In the Belle Harbor section of the Rockaways, Ray Marten is thankful his two teenage children are alive. At the height of the storm, he saw flames from burning homes dancing over the floodwaters. The three of them narrowly escaped just before the blaze engulfed their house. A neighbor in a scuba suit materialized out of the darkness and towed Marten's daughter to safety.

Rep. Jackson Jr. resigns; cites health

CHICAGO — Rep. Jesse Jackson Jr., a once-rising political star who has been on a monthslong mysterious medical leave for bipolar disorder while facing separate federal investigations, resigned from Congress on Wednesday, citing his health problems.

Jackson's resignation, just two weeks after voters re-elected him to a ninth full term, comes amid a House Ethics Committee investigation into his dealings with imprisoned ex-Illinois Gov. Rod Blagojevich and reports of a new federal probe into possible misuse of campaign money.

In his resignation letter to House Speaker John Boehner, Jackson admits "my share of mistakes" and, for the first time, publicly acknowledges that he is the subject of an ongoing federal investigation.

"I am aware of the ongoing federal investigation into my activities, and I am doing my best to address the situation responsibly, cooperate with the investigators, accept responsibility for my mistakes," he wrote.

Jackson added: "They are my mistakes and mine alone."

Emails offer details on bin Laden burial

WASHINGTON — Internal emails among U.S. military officers indicate that no sailors watched Osama bin Laden's burial at sea from the USS Carl Vinson and that traditional Islamic procedures were followed during the ceremony.

The emails, obtained by The Associated Press through the Freedom of Information Act, are heavily blacked out, but are the first public disclosure of government information about the al-Qaida leader's death. The emails were released Wednesday by the Defense Department.

Bin Laden was killed on May 1, 2011, by a Navy SEAL team that assaulted his compound in Abbottabad, Pakistan.

One email stamped secret and sent on May 2 by a senior Navy officer briefly describes how bin Laden's body was washed, wrapped in a white sheet, and then placed in a weighted bag.

Obama team saw Huntsman as threat

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama's campaign manager says he saw former Utah Gov. Jon Huntsman as the biggest potential threat to the president's re-election.

Jim Messina said Huntsman's appeal to moderate voters could have dug into the Democratic president's margin with that swath of Americans, whom Obama handily took to win a second term.

"We were honest about our concerns about Huntsman," Messina said this week at an event sponsored by Politico. "I think Huntsman (as Republican nominee) would have been a tough general election campaign."

Senior Obama adviser David Plouffe had expressed such concern even before Huntsman launched his failed presidential bid, with one journalist noting that a Huntsman candidacy made Plouffe a "wee bit queasy."

Huntsman suspended his White House bid after a disappointing third-place finish in the New Hampshire primary, where he had bet all his campaign hopes. He then endorsed Mitt Romney.

Cease-fire takes hold between Israel and Hamas

■ All win concessions, but uncertainty remains

By Josef Federman
and Karin Laub
Associated Press

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip — A cease-fire agreement between Israel and the Gaza Strip's Hamas rulers took effect Wednesday night, bringing an end to eight days of the fiercest fighting in years and possibly signaling a new era of relations between the bitter enemies.

The Egyptian-sponsored deal delivered key achievements for all involved. It promised to halt years of Palestinian rocket attacks on southern Israel and ease border closings that have stifled Gaza's economy, and it affirmed the emergence of Egypt's new Islamist government as a key player in a changing region. But vague language in the agreement and deep hostility between the combatants made it far from certain that the bloodshed would end.

News of the truce, announced in Cairo and reached after furious diplomacy that drew in U.S., U.N., European and regional diplomats, set off ecstatic celebrations in Gaza, where thousands poured into the streets, firing guns into the air, honking horns and waving Palestinian, Hamas and Egyptian flags.

In Israel, small demonstrations were held in communities that were struck by rockets. Protesters said the military should have hit Hamas harder and some held signs demanding security and denouncing "agreements with terrorists."

Leaders on both sides used tough language as they prepared to engage in indirect negotiations on a future border arrangement through Egyptian mediators.

"I know there are citizens that expected a wider military operation and it could be that it will be needed. But at this time the right thing of the state of Israel is to take this opportunity to reach a continuous cease-fire," Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said.

At a news conference in Cairo, the top Hamas leader in exile, Khaled Mashaal, claimed victory, saying the Israelis "failed in their adventure" and that Israel is "inevitably destined for defeat."

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton called it "a critical moment for the region."

"Egypt's new government is assuming the responsibility and leadership that has long made this country a cornerstone of regional stability and peace," Clinton said.

Israel launched its military offensive in Gaza on Nov. 14 in to halt months of renewed rocket fire from Gaza. In a first salvo, it assassinated the Hamas military chief, then bombarded more than 1,500 targets in eight days of airstrikes and artillery attacks. Palestinian militants led by Hamas showered Israel with more than 1,500 rockets, including longer-range weapons that reached as far as Jerusalem and Tel Aviv.

The fighting killed 161 Palestinians, including 71 civilians, and forced hundreds of thousands of people on both sides of the border to remain huddled indoors. Five Israelis were killed. It was the worst bloodshed since an Israeli invasion of Gaza four years ago that left hundreds dead.

Under the agreement, Egypt will play a key role in maintaining the peace. The U.S. also pledged engagement.

"In the days ahead, the United States will work with partners across the region to consolidate this progress, improve conditions for the people of Gaza, and provide security for the people of Israel," Clinton said at a joint news conference in Cairo with her Egyptian counterpart, Mohammed Kamel Amr.

By agreeing to the cease-fire, both Israel and Gaza's Hamas rulers stepped back from the brink of what could have been a full-fledged war. Both had compelling reasons to accept the Egyptian deal, even though its outlines are vague.

Israel, which had massed thousands of troops along the Gaza border, was warned by its Western allies, including the U.S., against launching a ground offensive. Hamas would likely have lost popular support if Gazans had to endure another devastating military invasion.

Hours before the deal was announced, a bomb exploded on a bus in Tel Aviv near Israel's military headquarters, wounding 27 people and raising fears of a breakdown in the diplomacy.

he blast, which left the bus charred and its windows blown out, was the first bombing in Tel Aviv since 2006. The bomb was placed inside the bus by a man who got off, said Yitzhak Aharonovich, Israel's minister of internal security. It was not immediately clear who was behind the attack.

Diabetes Epidemic in Children and Teens

By Ginny Sue Floyd, RPh., Mike Farmer, RPh., and Jed Dunaway, RPh.

From 2000 to 2008, the number of teenagers with pre-diabetes or diabetes increased from 9% to 23%. Just 15 years ago, less than 3% of new cases of childhood diabetes were type 2 (formerly called "non-insulin dependent" or "adult onset"). Now nearly 50% of all new cases of diabetes in adolescents are type 2, which is a preventable form of diabetes associated with low activity levels and poor diet. These children and teens not only have increased health risks associated with diabetes, ranging from cardiovascular disease to orthopedic problems; if they are obese, they can experience more social problems including bullying. This isn't all about a lack of exercise. Weight problems and diabetes (termed "diabesity") also occur because as a society, we eat too many processed foods which contain high fructose corn syrup, added salt or sugar, artificial sweeteners and other problematic additives. Ask us about customized medications, which can be compounded to be free of sugar, preservatives, lactose, and dyes.

Utilities caution about phone scam

LOUISVILLE — Louisville Gas and Electric Co. and Kentucky Utilities Co. say several customers have been targeted by scam artists claiming to be an employee and asking for bill payment. The companies say the person making the request then threatens to disconnect electric or natural gas service if the customer doesn't cooperate. LG&E and KU have notified law enforcement of the scam and say apparently only a few customers have been targeted. The companies advise customers to call if they receive a phone call, email or letter that is suspicious, and they say they don't call and ask for credit or debit card numbers or other personal information. Anyone who has been affected by the scam should call local police.

HAM
from 1A

“It was just out of necessity that they would kill hogs and cure hams” with salt and smoke each winter to ensure a supply of meat well into the following year and beyond, even without refrigeration, she said.

After some years, Mama Meacham told her grandson, “You have to learn how to do it.”

“He started giving them away” to friends, Coy said. Finally, in 1932, he founded Meacham Country Hams.

The little business developed a following, and in time enjoyed fame; Meacham won the grand champion title at the Kentucky Country Ham Breakfast at the Kentucky State Fair in 1983.

For many years, the Meachams have been supplying country hams to the historic Beaumont Inn in Harrodsburg, which boasts one of the most acclaimed dining rooms in the Bluegrass. “They age them an extra year — they have their own ham house — so they serve a two-year-old ham,” Coy said. “It’s delicious.”

A couple of years ago, Real Simple magazine selected Meacham’s smoked pepper ham as its favorite peppered ham.

Patriarch William Meacham continued overseeing the curing process for many years. When he died in 2008 at age 94, there was some question as to whether to continue to the business. But Coy and her uncle Rodman Meacham, who owns the enterprise, decided they couldn’t let it disappear.

A family photo shows William Meacham, founder of Meacham Country Hams, in the ham house on their farm near Sturgis.

So she took over running the company, becoming the family business’ third generation of management, still using the five-generation-old recipe.

“We’re still a small business,” operating from its original location at the family farm, Coy said.

But at this time of year, the little business gets very busy. Federal Express will drop off a semi-trailer four times a week for the next four weeks for Meacham Hams to fill with hams and its numerous other products.

Meacham Hams specializes in Kentucky dry-cured country hams, and offers both cooked and uncooked varieties in any size from whole hams to individual packaged slices.

“I’ve kind of noticed a resurgence in bigger cities” in interest in the tradition of eating country ham, Coy said. “I get calls from restaurants ...

“I think people kind of see it as a gourmet kind of food that they just can’t get down at their local store,” she said.

Beside country hams, “We’ve really diversified” the product offerings, adding city hams, bacon, sausage, turkeys, authentic Kerns Derby Pies, Kentucky Woods bourbon barrel cake, Woodford Reserve bourbon balls, gift baskets and more, much of it sold as corporate gifts.

Over the years, fans of her family’s hams have placed orders from near and far, as demonstrated by the numerous push pins that William Meacham stuck into a wall map to signify where he had shipped hams. The map still hangs in the Meacham’s office.

“We really have shipped almost everywhere in the United States,” Coy said.

During much of the year, callers to Meacham Hams are likely to speak to Amanda Coy herself. “I talk to a lot of the same people every year,” she said. “I enjoy that.”

But during the busy holiday season, some calls must be fielded by a professional call center.

And then there are orders that come through the company’s website at www.meachamhams.com.

“Probably 85 percent of our business is through the Internet,” Coy said. “because we’re so far off the beaten path that even people looking for us don’t know we’re here. It was either that or not survive.”

Mama Meacham could never have foreseen that people would use computers to order her family’s hams. But she handed down a country ham recipe that has proved ready for the 21st century.

To celebrate its 80th year in business, Meacham Country Hams will host an open house from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday at Meacham’s Ham House, located at 705 O’Nan Dyer Road approximately three miles north of Sturgis.

Guests can sample a variety of Meacham products and receive a free gift with each purchase. Several giveaways, both in-store and online, will also be conducted.

The event is being held in conjunction with American Express Small Business Saturday. Meacham Hams accepts American Express cards and will once again be participating in the Shop Small promotion this year. American Express cardholders who register in advance at www.ShopSmall.com can receive a $25 one-time credit on their credit card bill for shopping at a participating small business on Saturday.

MATH
from 1A

These methods focus on logic models and less on routine computational skills.

■ Additionally, students are spending more time in school on math.

Children in kindergarten through fifth grades now have 90 minutes of math instruction each day, up from 75 minutes daily. Middle school students now have 90 minutes of math instruction each day, up from 50 minutes every day.

■ Teachers continue to have quality professional development throughout the year and during the summer. This is to make sure that each teacher has an improved understanding of what it means to teach math to students in such a way that each child will be able to learn. The goal is to give each student a strong background in math so that they have many opportunities in the future.

■ The district created the position of district math coordinator to specifically work with math teachers in grades kindergarten through 12. Guess-Chumbler makes sure each teacher has access to the most up-to-date materials, teaching strategies and technology.

“For years, people thought math and computation were synonyms,” said Jo Swanson, assistant superintendent of teaching and learning.

“In fact, for years, math instruction meant learning only how to add, subtract, multiply and divide. It meant working with whole numbers, integers, fractions and percentages. It meant meaningless memorization of math ‘tricks’ instead of the mathematical relationships.

“Although the acquisition of basic math facts and computation is still important, it is less important than it once was because of the development of technology. In the past, schools spent years teaching children to do things that technology will do much more accurately in much less time.”

Guess-Chumbler added that math is thinking, reasoning, problem solving and figuring out why half of one-third is one-sixth, instead of just learning how to compute one-half multiplied by one-third, for example.

“Thinking, reasoning and problem solving (are) much more difficult to do than computation,” she said. “With these skills, students from the United States of America, specifically Henderson, will be able to fill these high paying and technical jobs that require a strong math background.”

That’s one reason why instructional staff members from Henderson County Schools will present at the AdvancED/U.K. College of Education Innovation Summit in Lexington on Nov. 29-30.

The summit will engage educators and administrators in a robust conversation about strategies and practices focused on narrowing the global achievement gap. Sessions will address issues surrounding student preparedness for the “next level” at the elementary, secondary and postsecondary levels.

The summit will assemble forward-thinking members of the Kentucky education community as well as regional and national leaders in education reform to share innovative approaches to drive excellence in the Commonwealth’s system of schools.

“Our school district was selected to present due to our innovative Next Generation Learning practices, decisions and support provided to our students and teachers,” Swanson said. “We are honored to share these practices with other educators around the state.”

Happy Thanksgiving, Friends!

Press, 104.1 FM-WIKY, and 93.5 The Wolf.

Approximately 100 volunteers from local labor unions — the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, the Teamsters and the National Electrical Contractors Association — transported the 60 light displays, which depict a wide range of themes including Santa shooting hoops, elves building a house, a gigantic holiday wreath and “Peace on Earth,” from storage and installed them along the milelong drive through the park.

A new display, an animated hummingbird, has been added this year, according to Easter Seals spokeswoman Pam Kirk. Other volunteer groups assisted with fine-tuning the displays and animation controls for today’s opening.

ABORTIONS
from 1A

est teen birthrate. New York, second to California in number of abortion providers, had the highest abortion rate, roughly eight times Mississippi’s.

Nationally since 2000, the number of reported abortions has dropped overall by about 6 percent and the abortion rate has fallen 7 percent.

By all accounts, contraception is playing a role in lowering the numbers.

Some experts cite a government study released earlier this year suggesting that about 60 percent of teenage girls who have sex use the most effective kinds of contraception, including the pill and patch. That’s up from the mid-1990s, when fewer than half were using the best kinds.

Experts also pointed to the growing use of IUDs, or intrauterine devices, T-shaped plastic spermkillers that a doctor inserts into the uterus. A study released earlier this year by the Guttmacher Institute, a nonprofit organization that does research on reproductive health, showed that IUD use among sexually active women on birth control rose from less than 3 percent in 2002 to more than 8 percent in 2009.

IUDs essentially prevent “user error,” said Rachel Jones, a Guttmacher researcher.

Ananat said another factor may be the growing use of the morning-after pill, a form of emergency contraception that has been increasingly easier to get. It came onto the market in 1999 and in 2006 was approved for nonprescription sale to women 18 and older. In 2009 that was lowered to 17.

Underlying all this may be the economy, which was in recession from December 2007 until June 2009. Even well afterward, polls showed most Americans remained worried about anemic hiring, a depressed housing market and other problems.

You might think a bad economy would lead to more abortions by women who are struggling. However, John Santelli, a Columbia University professor of population and family health, said: “The economy seems to be having a fundamental effect on pregnancies, not abortions.”

More findings from the CDC:

■ The majority of abortions are performed by the eighth week of pregnancy, when the fetus is about the size of a lima bean.

■ White women had the lowest abortion rate, at about 8.5 per 1,000 women of childbearing age; the rate for black women was about four times that. The rate for Hispanic women was about 19 per 1,000.

■ About 85 percent of those who got abortions were unmarried.

■ The CDC identified 12 abortion-related deaths in 2009.

Cats hold off Morehead

■ Goodwin, Poythress lift Kentucky past Eagles 81-70

By Gary Graves
Associated Press

LEXINGTON— Archie Goodwin scored a career-high 28 points, Alex Poythress added 20 and No. 8 Kentucky rallied past stubborn Morehead State, 81-70 on Wednesday night.

Their biggest contributions came at the foul line as the much-hyped freshmen combined to convert 20 of 25 free throws to help the Wildcats (3-1) fight back several times against the Eagles (3-2) before steadily pulling away in the second half.

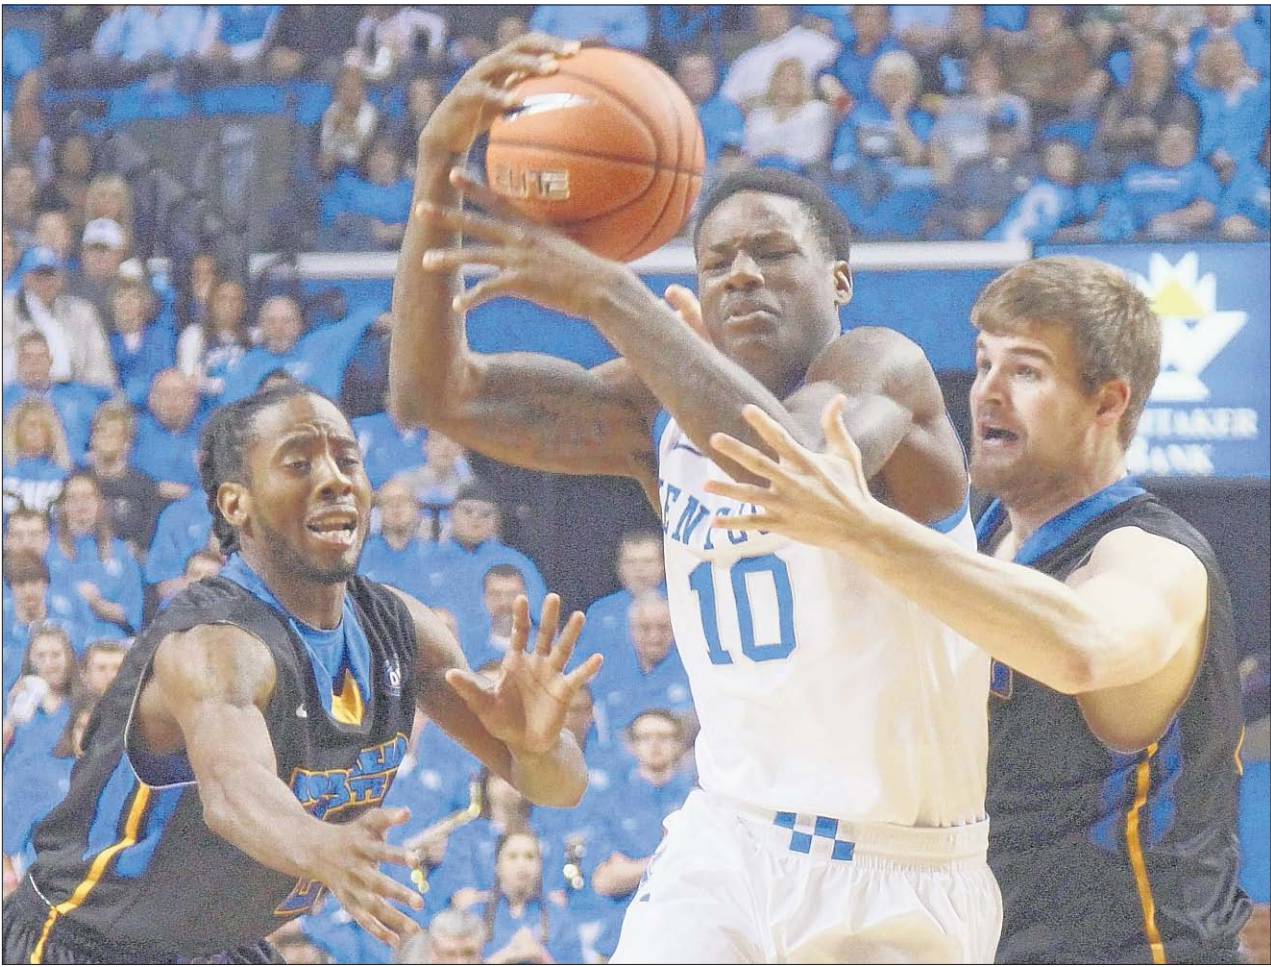

Julius Mays added 11 points, and freshmen forward Nerlens Noel and Kyle Wiltjer each had nine. Noel also had 11 rebounds and three blocks.

Milton Chavis scored 23 points for Morehead State, which had runs of 16-0 in the first half and 11-4 to start the second. Maurice Lewis-Briggs added 13 points, and Drew Kelly had 10.

The Eagles committed 32 fouls, while the Wildcats — 31 of 41 from the line — had 12.

“We gave them all we had, but we just couldn’t hold on,” said Morehead State coach Sean Woods, who played for Kentucky from 1990-92.

Kentucky shot 51 percent and outrebounded Morehead State 37-35 but was beaten 16-8 on the offensive boards.

JAMES CRISP/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kentucky's Archie Goodwin, middle, is pressured by Morehead State's Devon Atkinson, left, and Chad Posthumus during the first half of their game at Rupp Arena in Lexington on Wednesday night. Kentucky won 81-70.

The start offered a hint that it might be a defensive struggle.

Noel made it a block party in the first 5 minutes, violently swatting away three Eagles shots to the delight of 21,897 at Rupp Arena. His second block was one for the highlight reel, where he jumped several inches above the rim to redirect Jason Holmes' jumper.

Six-foot-3 guard Angelo Warner had no chance minutes later trying to drive inside on Noel, who easily smacked his attempt away.

That defense gave Kentucky a 6-0 lead but Morehead State wasn't fazed and went on the 16-0 run. Consecutive 3-pointers from Lewis-Briggs and Jarrett Stokes capped the run, and Khalil Owens contributed a couple of baskets inside and Warner added a dunk.

Morehead State's lead grew to 11 at 25-14 as Chavis converted a lob pass before hitting a 3-pointer, while Kelly banked a shot. Pressure defense played a role in the Eagles' run as they denied the Wildcats passing lanes and disrupted their movement.

Kentucky coach John Calipari had warned his team that the Ohio Valley Conference school would do this and it took most of the first half for his players to adjust.

Morehead State paid a price for their aggression, 13-3 foul discrepancy resulting in a 14-2 free throw edge for Kentucky. That helped the Wildcats rally over the final 5 minutes of the first half for a 32-21 lead at intermission.

An 11-4 run over the first 2:48 of the second half put Morehead State back ahead, forcing Kentucky to rally again. And free throws made the difference as the Wildcats converted five straight before Mays added a 3-pointer and a drive to provide breathing room at 60-50.

Texans face Lions today, eye spot in the playoffs

The Associated Press

The Houston Texans have put themselves in a position to be the NFL's first team to seal a spot in the playoffs and to move a step closer toward earning home-field advantage in the AFC.

Houston (9-1) has won four straight and is 4-0 on the road this season, giving the Texans a great shot to be in consecutive postseasons for the first time.

“It shows the progress we’ve made,” said tight end Owen Daniels, who has been with the franchise for seven of its 11 years of existence. “A few years ago, it took us until the end of the season to get that ninth win. We’re at that ninth win already.”

“We’re trying to stack ‘em up, but it’s good that those are possibilities this early in the season.”

Houston needs to win at Detroit (4-6) on Thursday and have a handful of teams lose, or tie, to earn a postseason bid by the end of the weekend.

The Lions, meanwhile, will have to pull off a string of upsets against a slew of good teams to reach the franchise's goal of making it to consecutive postseasons for the first time since the mid-1990s.

■ Washington at Dallas: Robert Griffin III, the Texas-bred quarterback who won the Heisman Trophy at Baylor, comes to his home state for the first time as a pro for the most traditional of Thanksgiving rivalries — Cowboys vs. Redskins.

Hold on a minute with all that drama and emotion building for Thursday's game. The Washington rookie grew up in Central Texas rooting for the Denver Broncos.

“It’s one game and that’s what we’ve got,” Griffin said. “We’ve got the Dallas Cowboys, and that’s what I’m going to play like.”

Griffin has practical reasons for approaching Thursday's game as one Washington needs to win. Dallas quarterback Tony Romo does, too.

The Redskins (4-6) kept themselves in the playoff conversation by coming off the bye with a 31-6 blowout of Philadelphia, sparked by 14 of 15 passing and four touchdowns from Griffin. A win puts the Cowboys (5-5) a half-game behind the New York Giants in the NFC East.

■ New England at N.Y. Jets: There were no sighs of relief, no jumps for joy when the New York Jets found out they wouldn't have to worry about Rob Gronkowski this week.

Sure, the New England Patriots lost perhaps the league's top playmaking tight end for a few weeks with a broken forearm. But Rex Ryan's team knew better than to celebrate.

“I don’t know,” Ryan said, shaking his head. “They have five tight ends on their roster, so I don’t know if they’ll put another guy in that role. I’m not sure how they’ll do it.”

Ryan is right about the Patriots' glut of tight ends. Aaron Hernandez could return for the game against the Jets (4-6) after missing the last three with a sprained right ankle, and New England also has Daniel Fells, Visanthe Shiancoe and Michael Hoomanawanui at the position.

New England coach Bill Belichick was typically tight-lipped when asked if the loss of Gronkowski will change the offense for the Patriots (7-3).

“Well, we’ll see,” he said. “I don’t know. We’ll see.”

‘Sir Jack’ the toast of basketball

■ Grinnell’s Jack Taylor becomes instant celebrity after scoring 138 points in a game

By Luke Meredith
Associated Press

How did Grinnell's Jack Taylor wind up with 138 points in a game?

Well, he did miss 56 shots, more than he made. And he didn't play for four minutes.

Otherwise he would have scored even more.

As it was, Taylor shattered the NCAA scoring record by 25 points Tuesday night in the Pioneers' 179-104 victory over Faith Baptist Bible in Grinnell, Iowa.

Taylor hoisted a mind-boggling 108 shots, one every 20 seconds. Layups, fadeaways and 3-pointers (27 of those) were all working in a display that had the NBA's basketball royalty buzzing a day later, from Kobe Bryant and Kevin Durant to Carmelo Anthony and LeBron James.

“It’s like a video game,” Anthony said. “How can you shoot 108 times?”

“It’s unbelievable, honestly,” James said. “There’s two games that I would love to see: One was Wilt, when he had 100, and this kid, I want to see him, too. Sir Jack.”

CORY HALL/ASSOCIATED PRESS

This image provided by Grinnell College shows Grinnell guard Jack Taylor (3) shooting during Tuesday night's Division III game against Faith Baptist Bible in Grinnell, Iowa. Taylor scored 138 points to shatter the NCAA scoring record.

Wilt Chamberlin's record of 100 points scored in 1962 still stands as the NBA mark. Taylor was the third player in NCAA basketball with at least 100 points, but his performance was the most prolific.

Taylor himself was still trying to catch his breath Wednesday.

“Honestly, it’s still not settling in. It was hard to sleep,” Taylor told The Associated Press after appearing on “Good Morning America” and the “Today” show.

Understandably so. Taylor is just a 5-foot-10, 170-pound sophomore from Black River Falls, Wis. How did he score more points than anyone in college history?

Well, he had 58 at halftime. And then he scored 30 more in the first nine minutes of the second half, draining seven straight 3s at one point.

The Division III record was the first to fall, as Taylor reached 91 points on a 25-footer from the left wing with 11:14 to go. He cracked 100 on a layup less than three minutes later, and with 4:42 to go he drained yet another 3 to pass the NCAA record of 113 set by Rio Grande's Bevo Francis against Hillsdale in 1954.

In 1953, Francis had 116 against Ashland Junior College but Frank Selvy is the only other player to reach triple figures, scoring 100 points for Division I Furman against Newberry in 1954. The previous Grinnell record was 89 by Griffin Lentsch last Nov. 19 against Principia.

Taylor made 27 of his 71 3-point attempts and was 52 of 108 overall. He had a hot hand, sure, but he plays in a system designed to reward high-volume shooting.

Grinnell's goal is to shoot within 12 seconds of getting the ball, something borrowed in part from the breakneck system Paul Westhead installed at Loyola Marymount in the 1980s. The 3 is the shot of choice — in fact, every player must shoot 100 3s every day in practice — and the four guys who don't shoot crash the boards. The Pioneers also press relentlessly on defense, hoping to force a turnover or a quick shot so they can get back to scoring more points.

The style demands fresh legs, and the Pioneers typically substitute every 60 seconds or so.

“It’s just something completely different than you face any other time you play,” said Brian Fincham, the coach at Faith Baptist Bible, a school in nearby Ankeny, Iowa, with fewer than 300 students. “If they’ve got a little bit of ability on you, it’s tough to keep up.”

The Pioneers didn't set out to have Taylor break any records Tuesday night. But after discovering Taylor had 58 points at halftime, they decided to go for it.

“A lot of people are saying it wasn't the most team-oriented thing to do,” Taylor said. “But I wouldn't have been able to do it without the encouragement and support from my teammates.”

Brutal basketball beckons in beautiful Bahamas

By Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

PARADISE ISLAND, Bahamas — It's not often eight college basketball coaches from around the country can agree on something.

Usually conference loyalty or recruiting prospects or old ties manage to find their way into an answer. But on Wednesday all eight coaches polled about what their teams were about to face spoke in the same key.

When asked about the quality of the field for the Battle 4 Atlantis, there were five greats, one unbelievable, one strongest ever and an amazing. When asked about the site of the tournament the answers ranged from spectacular to best place on Earth.

See, these coaches can all get along.

That would be until Thursday when No. 13 Missouri meets Stanford; No. 5 Duke faces Minnesota; No. 19 Memphis goes against Virginia Commonwealth and No. 2 Louisville meets Northern Iowa.

That's four ranked teams — half the field — and the others have all had some success in recent years.

They are not lying about the site, either. While the coaches and players have practices, film sessions and the like to take up their free hours, the friends, fans and family who have made the trip are more concerned with kissing dolphins, snorkeling and jet skiing.

These teams are facing different scenarios for the trip. The teams ranked in the top 10 are looking for three wins and verification of their lofty status as conference play gets closer.

The next group is made up of the other ranked teams and those close to it. They want to come out with no more than a loss so they can place themselves as teams trying to stay where they are and suddenly become sleeper favorites as the NCAA tournament nears. Then there are those who want to get better and return home with a different attitude as the season deepens.

Texas, TCU starting new tradition

By Jim Vertuno
Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas— Since 1895, the Texas Longhorns have played 75 games on Thanksgiving. Of those, 64 were against Texas A&M in a game that turned into a holiday tradition.

In case anyone forgot, tradition got blown to bits last year when the Aggies left the Big 12 for the Southeastern Conference and the Longhorns said “so long” to their oldest rivals. No. 18 Texas (8-2, 5-2) wanted to keep playing on Thanksgiving and the Big 12 this year served up TCU (6-4, 3-4), an old rival that has become a new one again.

Texas and TCU used to face each other every year in the now-defunct Southwest Conference, and having the Horned Frogs back on the schedule rekindles memories of the salty old days of name calling and sarcasm between programs.

“They are like a bunch of cockroaches,” former Texas coach Darrell Royal said in 1961 after unranked TCU spoiled the Longhorns’ national title hopes with a 6-0 victory. “It isn’t what he eats or totes off, but what he falls into and messes up.”

There’s no national title game on the line Thursday night, but the Horned Frogs could still mess things up for a Texas team that still has a shot at a Big 12 title and BCS bowl if it can win its last two games.

Zeller leads Hoosiers to victory in overtime

Wire reports

A night after an ineffective game, Cody Zeller had 17 points and eight rebounds to lead No. 1 Indiana to an 82-72 overtime win against Georgetown in the title game of the Legends Classic tournament on Tuesday night.

Jordan Hulls had 17 points for Indiana (5-0) and Yogi Ferrell had 14, including seven in overtime. His last points came on a 3-pointer he released just before the shot clock ran out, giving Indiana a 10-point lead with about a minute to go and, finally, clinching a game Indiana almost had wrapped up in regulation.

Victor Oladipo scored 12 points for Indiana and Christian Watford added 10 points and 10 rebounds for the Hoosiers, who took 36 free throws to Georgetown’s 10.

■ Iowa 63, Western Ky. 55: Mike Gesell scored 19 points, including three 3-pointers, to help Iowa beat Western Kentucky 63-55 on Tuesday night in the Cancun Challenge semifinals.

Melsahn Basabe added 11 points, eight of them af ter halftime, for the Hawkeyes, who shot 47 percent from the floor and improved to 5-0 for the first time since the 2008-09 season. Iowa, which never trailed, also moved to 18-0 over the past three seasons when holding its opponent to 60 points or fewer.

T.J. Price scored 16 points and Jamal Crook had 14 for the Hilltoppers (2-2), and Brandon Harris pulled down 10 rebounds. Western Kentucky shot just 33 percent from the field, including 5 of 21 on 3-point attempts.

■ Evansville 62, Tennessee Tech 50: Ned Cox scored 15 points Tuesday night as Evansville opened a big halftime lead, then eased to a 62-50 victory over Tennessee Tech in nonconference play.

Cox, who led all scorers and hit three 3-pointers while dishing six assists, led the Aces (3-2) to a 33-17 halftime lead. D.J. Balentine, who came off the Evansville bench to score 11 points, hit three treys himself.

In the second half, Tennessee Tech (3-1) outscored Evansville 33-29 but that wasn’t nearly enough.

‘Macho’ Camacho clinging to life

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico— Hector “Macho” Camacho was clinging to life Wednesday after being shot in the face while in a car, with doctors and his family expected to decide whether to remove the former boxing champion from life support.

Doctors initially had said Camacho, 50, was in critical, but stable condition and expected to survive after he was shot Tuesday night in his hometown of Bayamon. But his condition worsened overnight and his heart stopped at one point, said Dr. Ernesto Torres, director of the Centro Medico trauma center in San Juan.

“He’s battling minute to minute. This is the most important fight of his life,” Torres said.

COMMODITIES

Precious metals advanced Wednesday after the European Union failed to agree on more Greek aid and traders greeted news of a cease-fire between Israel and Hamas militants with skepticism.

Gold for December delivery rose $4.60, or 0.3 percent, to finish at $1,728.20 an ounce. Silver for December delivery gained 42 cents, or 1.3 percent, to end at $33.35 an ounce.

European Union officials couldn't reach a deal that would enable the payment of the next batch of rescue loans to Greece. That's prolonging the uncertainty over the future of the debt-stricken country and the 17-member eurozone.

Traders are also skeptical that a cease-fire between Israel and Hamas to end a week of fighting will hold.

"We've had a surge in open interest in gold in the last couple of days," said Gero Gero, vice president at RBC Global Futures in New York. "The European Union hasn't been able to agree on anything except where to sit around the table."

The price of copper fell 2 cents, or 0.6 percent, to $3.50 a pound, and has fallen since reaching a high of $3.98 for the year in February amid concern about the slow pace of global economic growth.

"We are seeing nothing happen with copper because of the slow recovery, and the reconstruction because of Superstorm Sandy hasn't begun yet," Gero said.

In other metals trading, palladium for January rose $12.95, or 2 percent, to $651.30 an ounce. Platinum gained $10.90, or 0.7 percent, to $1,583.90 an ounce.

The price of oil rose despite the announcement of a cease-fire agreement to end a week of fighting between Israel and Hamas militants. Benchmark oil rose 63 cents to finish at $87.38 a barrel. It climbed as high as $87.89 in the morning.

Oil fell nearly 3 percent Tuesday, as rumors of a potential cease-fire spread. The fighting had raised concerns about oil supply from the Mideast.

In agricultural contracts, December corn fell 2.25 cents, or 0.3 percent, to end at $7.4025 a bushel, and March soybeans ended 4.5 cents, or 0.3 percent, lower at $14.082 a bushel. Wheat for December delivery was little changed at $8.46 a bushel.

Trading volumes were lower than normal before the Thanksgiving holiday.

Advice

Sharing households also means sharing expenses

Dear Amy: I have been living with a guy for almost two years. Even though he owns his own house and continues to pay the bills on his own house, he lives with me (including eating all of his meals here). He has never offered to share the expense of living at my house, though I've brought it up. I have children at home, and his response has always been that his living in my house doesn't add any additional expenses. I disagree with this and feel that I am being taken advantage of and that he should offer to pay his own way — at the very least pay for his own food. Am I blowing things out of proportion, or is this guy basically living off of me? When he and I go out alone, he pays for my meals and any date-related expenses, but when we planned a recent trip together, he didn't hesitate to tell me exactly what my share would be. What's your take? — Disadvantaged Dear Disadvantaged: After two years of living together, you should not gingerly bring up a topic as important as money in the hopes that your guy "offers" to pay a share of the household living expenses. Nor should you necessarily characterize him as "living off" of you if he does pay for some things. If you share a household, then it is completely reasonable to put all of your shared expenses on the table. Include rent, utilities, food, etc., and negotiate what expenses you each will assume. Fortunately, if you can't work things out, he already has a house he can go home to. Dear Amy: I'm responding to a question in your column about whether it is wise to have a parent officiate at a wedding. As the father of three daughters and a pastor serving a parish, I declined to officiate at their weddings. I officiate at the weddings of members of my parish (and baptize their children). It is an important part of ministry. I am not my daughters' pastor. I am dad. On their wedding days I filled the role of dad and walked them down the aisle — a far more fulfilling role than to stand in for their pastor. They need to build their own relationship with their pastor. They already have one with me. — Pastor Mark Dear Pastor: Wise. Very wise. Send questions via email to askamytribune.com or by mail to Ask Amy, Chicago Tribune, TT500, 435 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, IL 60611.

Horoscope

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY: (Nov. 22). The next four weeks bring happy coincidences and fortunate encounters. Then it will be as if you're balancing on skates in late December and January. Challenges knock you around, and victories pull you up and help you glide gracefully to life's music. An investment pays in April. July changes your career course. Aquarius and Pisces people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 30, 25, 41, 17 and 39. ARIES: (March 21-April 19). You'll feel called to perform certain tasks, and you'll do so regardless of how laborious they may be. The moon entering your sign this evening warms your emotions and inspires you to share in new ways. TAURUS: (April 20-May 20). You'll carefully bring order to chaos and clarity to the picture. Whatever you have, it suddenly seems like more than enough to make not only your heart full, but many other hearts, as well. GEMINI: (May 21-June 21). Being ahead of your time proves that you think faster than most people, but it has little else to offer. Slow down your thinking so that you're right in step with today's opportunities. CANCER: (June 22-July 22). Some of your activities will be dependent on the completion of other activities over which you have no control. Be patient, but keep others on task with your gentle inquiry. LEO: (July 23-Aug. 22). You'll choose your words carefully today. You feel that it's your duty not only to express your gratitude, but also to live by it. That which you are thankful for, you will also take care of, protect and develop. VIRGO: (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You'll have luck doing your own thing, within certain bounds. You'll build on a tradition, repeating the steps that have worked in the past and adding a few detours and embellishments to make it your own. LIBRA: (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). In the morning, the day may seem more complicated than it really is. "Begin at the beginning," the King said gravely, "and go on till you come to the end; then stop." — Lewis Carroll, "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland" SCORPIO: (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Venus newly exploring your part of the sky bodes well for forming easy connections. You'll be a part of an experience that reflects your values and serves the community of which you are an integral member. SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Most challenges are small, and you take them for the normal part of life they are. Today's slightly bigger challenges will make you feel passionately engaged with your purpose. CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You're wise to limit your communication output and welcome opportunities for greater input. In other words, talking less will say more. Listening will open the way to connection and love. AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You'll react to a rapidly changing plan. Your ability to go with the flow is impressive and attractive. Tonight, an exception to the rule will surprise you. PISCES: (Feb. 19-March 20). The day brings a fulfilling experience. Neptune, your guiding planet, harmonizes with Venus to bring more love, beauty and sharing into your world than you expected to enjoy.

Readers air perfume ideas

Dear Readers: In a recent column, I explained how to layer scents of a favorite perfume. I asked how many perfumes you have, and the responses varied greatly! You wrote in with not only the number of perfumes, but also asking for a reminder that many people are highly sensitive to perfumes. Here are some comments: ■ A Reader, via email, said, "I counted three perfumes on my counter." ■ Kathy in California wrote: "I'm a perfume junkie. I have 45 bottles. Each morning, I choose a fragrance for the day. I don't feel dressed without my perfume." ■ Jan in Texas wrote, "I have been wearing the same perfume since I was a senior in high school back in 1969, which means I have been wearing it 43 years or so." ■ Jody, via email, said, "I have well over 200-plus full-size bottles of fragrances ... as I LOVE having a choice." On the other side: ■ Tracey, via email, said: "Too bad you didn't discourage use of perfumes and scented lotions instead of showing how to layer fragrances to make it 'more.' Too many, including myself, are overly sensitive to chemical fragrances and can barely stand to even walk near a perfume-wearing person."

Thanksgiving is day to reflect on God's goodness

It also happened on special occasions, such as after they had gained victory over their enemies. The Psalmist declared, "The Lord is my strength and my shield ... I will give thanks to him in song" (Psalm 28:7). It's important to set aside time to reflect on God's goodness to us — which is what we all should do as we celebrate Thanksgiving this year. No matter what you might be going through right now, God has blessed you

Dear Dr. Graham: Does our holiday of Thanksgiving come from a religious event that's found in the Bible, like Christmas or Easter do? If so, what did it originally celebrate? — Mrs. T.O'C. Dear Mrs. T.O'C.: Unlike Christmas and Easter (which commemorate the birth, death and resurrection of Jesus), our annual celebration of Thanksgiving doesn't come directly from a specific event in the Bible. But it does come indirectly from the Bible — because every year God's people came together to thank God for His blessings. This happened more than once during the year — for example, at the beginning of the harvest, and then again at the end of the harvest season.

Lake lovers suffer from harmless swimmer's itch

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: We have cottage on a lovely lake, and we spend the entire summer there. It takes my husband close to two hours to commute to his work, but he doesn't mind. This summer, two of my children all of a sudden broke out in a terribly itchy red rash. It appeared soon after they got out of the water. It suddenly went away, but it came back again. I used alcohol on the rash. My kids said it did lessen the itch. I was trying to decide if I should take them to the doctor, but the rash completely left in two days, and they never felt sick. What was this? Is it the same thing that people get from sitting in hot tubs? — R.R. Dear R.R.: I should have answered this in the summer. More people could have used the information then. But this will prepare you for next year. Your kids had swimmer's itch. It's caused by a parasite carried by water fowl and snails. Both release eggs into the water, and the eggs hatch into tiny, colorless critters, 1 millimeter (0.04 inches) in length. They burrow into the skin. An itchy, red rash develops soon after the swimmer gets out of the water. It fades quickly but reappears in 10 to 13 hours. It disappears in a few days. It's not a health threat. It is annoying. It's not spread to others. No treatment is necessary other than treatment for suppressing the itch. Rubbing alcohol was a good choice on your part. Antihistamines and cortisone creams also can control the itch. The highest population of the parasite is in water where vegetation grows, and in shallow water where the water temperature is higher than in deeper water. Next year, have your kids shower immediately after swimming and vigorously dry themselves with a towel. Take a survey. See if your neighbors face the same problem. If they do and if they want to eliminate it, they can hire experts to feed water fowl with medicated cornfeed that does away with the parasite they carry. The same people can lower the snail population. Swimmer's itch isn't the same as hot tub folliculitis, another itchy skin rash that's often transmitted in hot tub water, swimming pools and water slides. Its cause is the bacterium pseudomonas. Time heals this problem, too.

Dr. Paul Donohue will be retiring at the end of 2012. Dr. Keith Roach will share the byline during the transition period and assume sole authorship of "To Your Good Health" beginning in January.

Some lucky turkeys wind up as pets, not dinner

By Sue Manning
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Turkeys: Main course or animal companion?

OK, so it isn't even close. According to the industry group National Turkey Federation, more than 46 million of the big birds will be served as Thanksgiving dinner this year. Just a few hundred will get to experience the holiday as a pet, said turkey rescue Farm Sanctuary.

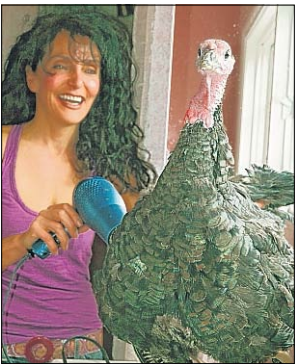

"I believe they make amazing companions, but they are different than cats or dogs," said Susie Coston of Watkins Glen, N.Y. For one thing, turkeys get too hot and are too messy to come indoors, said Coston, the national shelter director for the Farm Sanctuary.

Taking the large bird on as a companion requires more responsibilities than owning a dog or a cat, experts say. "If people are adopting domesticated turkeys, they should be aware that it's not a simple endeavor and would take a considerable amount of work," said NTF spokeswoman Kimmon Williams.

"Turkeys as pets is a complicated question," she added.

Like other animals that serve as companions to humans, turkeys come in different breeds, with some weighing as much as 60 pounds, Williams said. Every turkey has its own personality — and some can be aggressive, she said.

Most pet turkey owners agree the birds aren't the kind of pets that can be walked on a leash or

Coston said, for instance, that she wouldn't sleep with her turkey "like I do my dogs and cats. But I don't love dogs more than I do pigs or dogs and cats more than chickens and turkeys. I have a different relationship with each of them."

"Turkeys are inherently nervous and do not tend to be warm and cuddly. Turkeys also need plenty of space to run around in and be fed the appropriate diet," Williams noted.

Still, Karen Oeh, who will be getting four pet turkeys just before Thanksgiving, said she preferred them over dogs.

"Dogs are needy to me. They need affection, attention, security, they always need you to do something for them. With the turkeys, I don't feel guilty because I didn't take them to the park and throw the Frisbee," said the Ben Lomond, Calif., resident.

Despite their differences, turkeys and traditional pets share traits such as the ability to love unconditionally, loyalty and intelligence, owners said. Dr. Drucilla Roberts, a pathologist from Millis, Mass., pointed out a bonus: "They give us manure and eggs."

"I was always told that turkeys were the dumbest of farm animals. But that's not true. They know us and protect us. If a stranger comes, the turkey is right in his face and clucking and raising its feathers. They make great noises," Roberts said.

Commercial turkeys are usually the ones that get adopted as pets: Coston said most turkeys rescued by the Farm Sanctuary come from factory farms and have been debeaked, detoed and fattened. Many arrive as victims of neglect, cruelty or hoarding; they fall off farm trucks; or they mysteriously show up in boxes on doorsteps, she said.

The sanctuary, which has locations in California and in New York, places about 50 turkeys a year and has found homes for more than 1,500 birds since it started 26 years ago, Coston said. Hundreds of other birds, including the weakest or those with special needs are not adopted out because the rescues can deal with their problems easier than adopters can, Coston said.

Karen Dawn, an author from Los Angeles, gets two turkeys from Farm Sanctuary every year and socializes them before they move on. This year's birds are going to live in Malibu.

They arrive stinky, so she gives them a bath and blow dry. "They relax like this is the best day they have had so far," said Dawn, who wrote "Thanking the Monkey: Rethinking the Way We Treat Animals."

Turkeys make great outdoor pets and "make better pets than other birds that you have to keep in a cage indoors," she said.

Dawn said her two 20-pound turkeys will be at her Thanksgiving dinner — but as guests. Rosie and Martha will greet two dozen human guests in the garden and watch the sun set over the Pacific Ocean, while Dawn serves up Wild Turkey bourbon — and tofurkey.

Violent dolphin deaths in Gulf a mystery

By Tamara Lush
Associated Press

ALONG THE GULF COAST — Over the past several months, dolphins have washed ashore along the northern Gulf Coast with bullet wounds, missing jaws and hacked off fins, and federal officials said they are looking into the mysterious deaths.

The most recent case was of a dolphin found dead off the coast of Mississippi, its lower jaw missing.

Officials from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said Monday they're asking everyone from beachgoers to fishermen to wildlife agents to be on the lookout for injured or dead dolphins — and any unusual interaction between the mammals and people.

"It's very sad to think that anyone could do that to any animal," said Erin Fougères, a marine mammal scientist for NOAA's southeast office in St. Petersburg, Fla. "There have been some obviously intentional cases."

Fougères said five dolphins have been found shot. In Louisiana, two were shot in 2011 and one in 2012. And in Mississippi, three were found shot this year, the most recent one last week, which was first reported by the Sun-Herald newspaper.

Besides the shootings, a dolphin in Alabama was found with a screwdriver stuck in its head over the summer. Another in Alabama had its tail cut off, and that animal survived. Still others were missing fins or had cuts to their bodies.

Dolphins are among the species protected by the 1972 Marine Mammal Protection Act. Violators can be fined up to $10,000 per violation and sent to prison for a year.

The California-based Animal Legal Defense Fund said it is offering a $5,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of whomever harmed the dolphins.

The gruesome discoveries are heart-breaking for Gulf Coast scientists, who follow the population. Fougères said that two months before the 2010 oil spill disaster off the coast of Louisiana, dolphins began stranding themselves and that there were unusually high mortality rates — possibly due to a cold winter that year.

Since then, the spill and another cold winter in 2011 have contributed to several deaths within the Gulf's dolphin population, experts say. Investigators have also found discolored teeth and lung infections within some of the dead dolphins.

Since Feb. 2010, experts have tallied more than 700 recorded dolphin deaths. Experts have also found increased "human interaction" cases, which include dolphins tangled in fishing lines — and the more violent incidents.

Today in history

Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Nov. 22, the 327th day of 2012. There are 39 days left in the year. This is Thanksgiving Day.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 22, 1963, President John F. Kennedy was shot to death during a motorcade in Dallas; Texas Gov. John B. Connally, in the same open car as the president, was seriously wounded. A suspect, Lee Harvey Oswald, was arrested.

On this date:

In 1718, English pirate Edward Teach — better known as “Blackbeard” — was killed during a battle off present-day North Carolina.

In 1935, a flying boat, the China Clipper, took off from Alameda, Calif., carrying more than 100,000 pieces of mail on the first trans-Pacific airmail flight.

In 1954, the Humane Society of the United States was incorporated as the National Humane Society.

In 1990, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, having failed to win re-election of the Conservative Party leadership on the first ballot, announced her resignation.

Ten years ago: The Bush administration eased clean air rules to allow utilities, refineries and manufacturers to avoid having to install new anti-pollution equipment when they modernized their plants.

Five years ago: A gunman shot and killed his ex-wife, their three children, ages 12, 10 and 6, and himself in a park in Laytonsville, Md. French rail workers who'd staged a nine-day-old strike voted to return to the job.

One year ago: Ryan Braun was voted the NL MVP after helping the Milwaukee Brewers win their first division title in nearly 30 years.

Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade

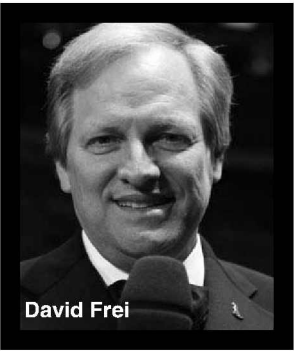

A shy giant named Companion, the creation of Brooklyn-based artist KAWS — aka Brian Donnelly — joins the ranks of big balloons for this year's parade. As always, the most popular human character in the lineup will be Santa, whose appearance signals the start of the holiday season.

11:30 a.m. on 44
NFL Football

It's a veritable Turkey Day feast of NFL football, starting with this clash between the Houston Texans and the Detroit Lions at Ford Field. Then over on Fox, it's a matchup of NFC East rivals when the Washington Redskins head to Dallas to take on the Cowboys. The Thanksgiving night game goes to NBC this year, with an AFC East rivalry game at New York's MetLife Stadium between the Jets and the New England Patriots.

12 p.m. on 14
The National Dog Show

As much of a Thanksgiving Day tradition as the parades, this special takes viewers to the Kennel Club of Philadelphia's annual competition, where top dogs vie for the coveted best in show title. John O'Hurley hosts, with David Frei providing expert commentary and Mary Carillo reporting from the sidelines.

6:30 p.m. on 13
College Football

The Dallas Cowboys aren't the only Texas team hosting a big Thanksgiving game. The state is big enough for a Big 12 matchup between the TCU Horned Frogs and the Texas Longhorns in Austin. The Longhorns can put up a lot of points with quarterback David Ash and running back Joe Bergeron. TCU started the season 4-0, and then its best player, quarterback Casey Pachall, withdrew from the school in October to seek treatment for substance abuse.

7 p.m. on 25
A Charlie Brown Thanksgiving

In this 1973 animated special, the pressure is on for Charlie Brown after pushy Peppermint Patty decides she and the gang will have Thanksgiving dinner at "Chuck's" house. First, though, he has to submit to a mortifying ritual of fall: Lucy yanking the football away just as he tries to kick it. Still, everything ends happily as the gang gathers around a pingpong table for an unusual feast prepared by Snoopy and Woodstock.

7 p.m. on 19
The Vampire Diaries

Elena (Nina Dobrev) awakens after the accident and realizes she died with vampire blood in her system and now must become a vampire or perish. Stefan and Bonnie (Paul Wesley, Kat Graham) vow to find a way out for Elena, but Bonnie pays a horrible price for her efforts, while Damon (Ian Somerhalder) is furious with Stefan for letting Elena die. Zach Roerig also stars in "Growing Pains."

8 p.m. on 19
Beauty and the Beast

Cat and Tess (Kristin Kreuk, Nina Lisandrello) investigate the death of a young ballerina and discover that she had tried to report an assault. Vincent (Jay Ryan) thinks the dancer's understudy (Elizabeth Blackmore) may know something she isn't telling. Cat asks Vincent to help her decipher a medical document she found with her mother's things in "Proceed With Caution."

8:30 p.m. on 25
Movie: Bad 25

Spike Lee directed this documentary that shares fresh insights into Michael Jackson's creative vision that resulted in his landmark "Bad" album, which marks its 25th anniversary this year. The film features numerous interviews conducted personally by Lee with Jackson's confidants, choreographers, musicians and collaborators, including Oscar-winning director Martin Scorsese, who directed the "Bad" music video.

9 p.m. on 16
Winged Seduction: Birds of Paradise

In this new hourlong special, National Geographic photographer Tim Laman and ornithologist Ed Scholes attempt to film the various, and often bizarre, mating dances and rituals of the 39 species of birds of paradise of New Guinea.

Elementary

Sherlock (Jonny Lee Miller) uses his deductive powers to help the police investigate the murder of a young man who was shot as soon as he entered his apartment. Watson (Lucy Liu) has dinner with an old flame (Bill Heck) in "While You Were Sleeping."

The Big Bang Theory

Ever have one of those chilling moments when your life flashes before you? Well, imagine how Penny

(Kaley Cuoco) feels after she becomes injured while Leonard, Howard and Raj (Johnny Galecki, Simon Helberg, Kunal Nayyar) are away camping, leaving only one person for her to rely on, Sheldon (Jim Parsons), in "The Adhesive Duck Deficiency."

An elusive master thief has targeted a handful of New York's most prestigious banks, so it's up to Peter and Neal (Tim DeKay, Matthew Bomer) to thwart his next heist. It soon becomes clear, however, that the duo is dealing with no ordinary criminal.
